L.O. To write a remembrance poem.

We remember

In Flanders fields,
Where poppies grow,
Friends and foes,
Come and go,

We remember them,

They left the ones
The ones they loved the most,
They fought for their country,
They protected our homes,

We respect them,

We remember those that fought,
We remember those that died,

We won't forget them.

Give thanks

Give thanks for soldiers that fought
They risked their innocent lives
For you and me.
To help save our country.

Gives thanks for soldiers that fought
They left their families behind
Heart Broken wives and children
To defend their land.

Give thanks for soldiers that fought
The land is a mess destroyed
The houses are a mess
That's all that's left is distraught families.

-:A Fallen Soldier:

A poppy would grow,
and a soldier would go...
Every life taken,
every heart broken,
For the ones we loved,
now lie up above...

Desperate to end this tragic war,
Soldiers still fought, aching and sore...
Nobody knew, the pain that was due,
at no mans' land,
a place that should've been ~~band~~ banned.

Take a chance to remember, the 11th November, 1918...

Thursday 10th November

L.o. To write a remembrance poem.

We will remember them

As the soldiers fall,
The poppies grow tall,
Their friends and family sad and dishearted,
Soldiers and their lives will forever be parted,

We will ~~remember~~ remember them,

Give thanks to the countries who helped us,
Give thanks to the soldiers who died,
Give thanks for their work and dedication,
Give thanks to the Lord who saved them,

We will remember them,

Remember what those soldiers did for you,
Take two minutes to think it through,
They could have run in fear,
But still battled for all those years,

We will remember them.

Give thanks for the soldiers who fought for us,

Give thanks for the soldiers that died for us,
For the lives of me and you.

Give thanks for the soldiers who marched through the mud,
Give thanks for the people who rationed their food,
Give thanks for the people who flew in the planes,
For the lives of me and you.

Give thanks to the people who suffered through pain,
agony and despair,
Give thanks to the people who were full of dismay,

Remembrance

The red poppies grow,
Between the coffins, sow on, sow,
Fighting at war,
Leaving their familys at home feeling poor.

We will remember them.

We give thanks to those who fought and risked their lives,
Leaving their loved ones behind,
Loud bangs as they sleep,
All the happy times they will keep.

We will remember them.

The soldiers fight,
They fight from ~~morning~~ <sup>morning</sup> to night,
Remember the ones who gave up their lives,
Remember the ones that survived

We will remember them.

AO: To write a remembrance poem.

The poppies that grow

The poppies that grow in the field,
The poppies that helped saved our lives,
The poppies that grew
As the soldiers that painfully died.

The poppies that grow in the field,
The poppies that resembled soldiers lives,
The poppies that show
Who fought for us during 1914.

The poppies that grow in the field,
Show how thankful and thoughtful
We should be,
For those who saved our lives

Remembrance

We give our thanks to those who fought,
They will be remembered forever more,
100 years ago, they stepped onto the trenches,
Today we place flowers on their benches.

The poppies that grew,
They soldiers that flew,
Families, who were dishearted,
Souls parted.

They are the ones who foughted for our country and lives,
Foughted day till' night,
Ones who wouldn't give up through gunshots and cries.

Remember, Remember,
The 11th of November
Remember, Remember,
Remember.
